

there are [ðə ɑ:]
a film [ə film]
the cinema [ðə 'sɪnəmə]
(a) television [ə 'telɪvɪʒn]

There are three posters in the classroom.

Are there three posters in the classroom?	Yes, there are three posters in the classroom.
Are there questions and answers in this book?	Yes, there are questions and answers in this book.
Are there films on television?	Yes, there are films on television.
Are there films at the cinema?	Yes, there are films at the cinema.
Are there letters in the book?	Yes, there are letters in the book.

- Are there films on television?
- Yes, there are films on television.

there is not
music ['mju:zɪk]

There isn't a television in the classroom.

Is there a television in the classroom?	No, there isn't a television in the classroom.
Is there a tall man in the picture?	No, there isn't a tall man in the picture.
Is there music at the cinema?	No, there isn't music at the cinema.
Is there a cinema in Amberley?	No, there isn't a cinema in Amberley.
Is there a CD in my pocket?	No, there isn't a CD in your pocket.

- Is there a CD in my pocket?
- No, there isn't a CD in my pocket.

